Hello fellow networkers!

I hope all of you are networking and doing well. ☺

It's been a while since we met and learnt a few tips & tricks from each other to network better. So, this might land as a surprise in your inbox today.
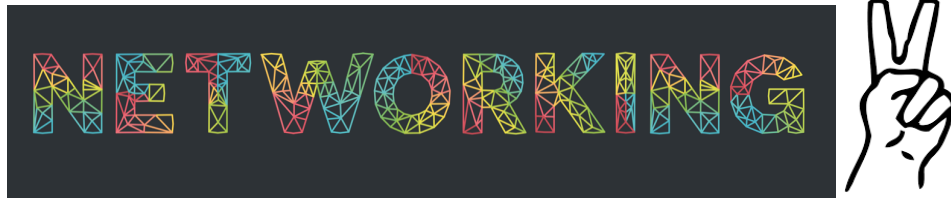

I felt like this might be a good time to check our progress on the networking scale so far. Basis what we had discussed in the workshop on January 5th, where are we on the following on two tasks?

Preparation of Network Maps

We will love to see what your network looks like on networking sites like LinkedIn. As always, a great network of connections with people in and around your sphere of work will always have more impact than just connecting with everyone possible. So, spread your networks wider and share some numbers with us along with a few techniques you used to make your network map stronger.

Problems I solve through Networking

This requires you to state a problem/requirement that you have faced so far which you have been able to solve through networking and reaching out to new professionals. For example: "I needed to hire a Business Development person at my organization. I reached out to my connections on LinkedIn and college alumni groups to find a good candidate and I did manage to find someone who suits the role perfectly." If you could narrate your story here and let us know we will be able to gauge the leverage to have to work your way through your network. So ponder over whom you recently networked with and how they helped you.

We're expecting to hear from you on these two tasks in no time now. Wear your thinking caps, recall your takeaways from the workshop and seize this!

Let's get this going and strive to become better networkers. Good luck & write soon!
